Pretty Autumn Wedding Solemnized In Tinley Church

A very beautiful wedding took place in the German M. E. church with Rev. Hedler officiating, when Ruth Mae Andres became the bride of Percy L. Jochum of Blue Island. Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The occasion was of double significance, it being the twenty-seventh wedding anniversary of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Andres.

The bride was beautifully gowned in white tulle and veil and carried orange blossom wreath, and carried call lilies with lily of the valley.

The attendants of the bride were her cousin, Miss Mabelle Andres, as maid-of-honor, who was attired in orchid sateen and net with hat to match; and Miss Gladys Hollstein who was superb in peach sateen and net with net hat, also Miss Orletta Jochum, sister of the groom, who wore green sateen with net hat. All three carried colonial bouquets.

The ushers were as follows. Carl Jochum, cousin of the groom, acted as best-man and Emil and Paul Bettenhausen ushers.

After the ceremony a dinner and reception were held at Community hall in Tinley Park. Games were enjoyed by young and old.

The bride and groom left on a trip east and upon their return will reside in Mrs. Hirsch's house in Tinley Park.

The groom is employed at the First National bank in Chicago and formerly lived in Tinley Park, so will be welcomed back by his many friends.

The best wishes of the community go to this young couple.

State Delays Mokena Street Improvement Work

The dilatory methods of the State Highway Department in approving the contract of the Seneca Petroleum Co., of Chicago for laying an asphalt top on Front street in Mokena has delayed the work so it is almost a question of whether it will be completed by October 15th, the dead line set for all bituminous work in the state by the State Highway department.

The Mokena village officials have been hot on the trail of the state officials to get their final OK on the work to be done.

The contractors had liked to start last Friday but failure of the state to approve the contract held up the work. At the village board meeting Tuesday night this matter took up most of the Board's time. The contractors advised that if they did not hear from the state in a few days, they would proceed with the work anyway.

It is understood that the project will be started the latter part of this week.

If weather conditions remain favorable the job maybe finished by Oct. 15th, but in case of inclement weather the work may not be finished until next spring.

Had the state acted more promptly and efficiently the work might be nearly completed by now. There seems to be a lot of red-tape connected with the smallest and simplest of jobs.

Mokena has spent over $475 for labor on its streets this summer.

When the resurfacing work on Front street is begun, it is understood local men will be employed.

The asphalt top is to be 20 feet wide from Wolf Road to Division street in front of the Mokena hardware store and 18 feet wide from there to the old school house corner.

It is hoped that the new top will prove more satisfactory than the job put down a number of years ago. The new job will cost over $3000. Gas tax money from the state and county aid will pay for the work.

SUMMER HAS WALKED SO SOFTLY

Summer has walked so softly
Over the flowery grass,
Summer has walked so swiftly
No one has seen her pass.
Now yellow leaves are blowing
Down the path she trod
Between the first blue iris,
And the last of the Gollenrod.

And where she lingered for saying,
Goodbye, had any heard—
No doubt we thought it a wind song,
Or the cry of a migrating bird—
Are only a mist of wild asters
And a thistledown-light imprint
Of a small and worn green sandal
On a bed of rusty mint.
—Ethel Romig Fuller.

Keeping Their Eye on the Ball

NEW LENOX ORGANIZES ANTI THIEF ASSO.

Farmers of New Lenox Township have been aroused to action against cattle thieves as a result of cattle thefts in New Lenox Township recently and Monday night a special meeting was held at the New Lenox Public school auditorium for the purpose of organizing a Anti-Thief Protective association. There was a good attendance. The following officers were elected:

President, Joseph Kestel.
Vice-President, Harry Storms.
Secretary, George Woodcock.
Treasurer, M. F. Delaney.

Program Chairman, E. J. Hobson. The plan of the organization is to have six men sworn in as special deputies and to enroll as many members as possible in the organization. In case of a theft quick action can be taken by the group.

Two men were appointed in each school district in the township to make a canvass of each district for members.

The membership fees have been set at $1.00 per year. Considerable interest is being shown in the new organization.

Similar organizations have been formed all over Will County and officials of these various organizations were to meet in Joliet Thursday afternoon to consider county wide plans for combating cattle rustling and chicken stealing.

4-H MEETING
The monthly meeting of the Frankfort-New Lenox 4-H club will be held Monday, October 7, at the home of Mary Catherine and Bety Marti. The record books for this year are to be filled and brought to this meeting. All members are urged to be present.

Farmers Hear Blood Stirring Farm Conditions

A number of farm folks, members of the United Farmers of Illinois attended the regular meeting of the Wilmington Local at the Opera House Tuesday evening, Sept. 7. We had visitors who were able speakers from Grundy and Kankakee counties and they added much to our meeting.

The most interesting feature of the evening was the report of delegates to the State Convention at Elgin, Sept. 10-11. Several of the delegates gave a splendid report, also conveying much of their inspiration and enthusiasm to the assembly.

Several coming events were planned on which we will report at a later date. Plans also were started for a local project of benefit to the entire community.

In the round table discussion of current events pertaining to farm problems, much light was thrown on the new Potato Control Act, of which you will all (consumer and producer alike) hear plenty in the near future. If this act doesn't awaken every red-blooded American, then there just isn't any hope!

Tribute was paid to our departed champion of agriculture, Huey P. Long.

Millions of people recently read the tragic story of how a Chicago youth was shot to death for trying to take a pint bottle of milk from a neighbor's back porch. Caught in the act the youth was shot to death. Investigation disclosed that he was trying to supply milk for a baby sister starving and crying at his poverty stricken home, where milk had been unknown for many days.

Multiply this humble Chicago home by four or five millions of similar homes. See there the babies

Royal Neighbors Hold Regular Business Meeting

The Orland R. N. A. held their regular monthly business meeting on Thursday night, Sept. 26 at Creer's hall. Two candidates, Violet Jacobson and Lucille Reish were admitted to membership. These two young ladies are graduates of the Juvenile organization of the Royal Neighbors and come fitly prepared to assume the full duties and responsibilities of Royal Neighbor membership.

It is planned to hold a play during the fall season, and a committee consisting of Mrs. Laurence Burkhardt as chairman and Mrs. Louis Arnold and Mrs. George Cox are already hard at work planning the details of this enterprise. The play selected is "The Ghost Parade" and is said to be a very entertaining spectacle. The committee will be very busy selecting a cast and it is hoped that rehearsals will be under way inside of a week.

The Juvenile organization held a social meeting on Wednesday evening, Oct. 2nd. This was in the nature of a testimonial farewell party to two of its members, Lucille Reish and Violet Jacobson, who have graduated from its ranks into full fledged membership in the parent organization. The Royal Neighbors' games were played and refreshments were served under the direction of a committee of young folks consisting of Mae Reisch, Marie Heiting, Mildred Uthe, and Wm. Iverson who were assisted by Mrs. Einar Rasmussen and Mrs. S. S. Knox. A most delightful evening was enjoyed by everyone present.

denied milk and other ordinary food necessities. Hunger and want stalk this land of ours. Human beings are driven to steal by their terrible distress. Death to a young American boy for a pint of milk. In this situation he's the "surplus" of farm products which are being destroyed.

Can anyone be honest and say there is a surplus when records show that for the first six months of this year, this country imported $680,000,000 worth of agricultural products. We believe the American farmer should produce the food for the American people.

Congress has given the President the power to lower tariffs 50 per cent. This was largely accomplished by the help and power of the International bankers. There was also a bill passed which gives foreign nations the right to store their agricultural products in our ports, for one year, duty free. This, you can see, gives them a chance to watch and when our price rises to a high point, it enables them to pay a small tariff and sell in our country. For example, last spring, when the farmers were sowing oats, the price was around 65 to 70c per bushel. Farmers had none to sell. As our crop advanced during the summer, the price dropped until now at harvest, the price is all the way from 14 to 27c a bushel. This price will remain there until at least 85 to 90 per cent of this grain is in the hands of speculators and in storage. Then they will drive the price up so they can justify charging a high price for the processed products.

This is also true with every commodity the farmer raises. Some of you might ask—Why does the farmer sell when the price is so low? Because of circumstances the farmer has more obligations than he can meet so for several years he has scraped every bin of every grain he can spare. We, of the United Farmers say if there is a surplus any year, instead of destroying or even restricting production, it should remain on the farm, as in-

Not Heeding Stop Sign Causes Death

As a result of paying no heed to the stop sign at Wolf Road and 143rd street west of Orland Park resulted in one death and serious injuries last Saturday night when two cars crashed at that intersection.

Robert Clananahan, 26 years old, of 5523 Kenmore ave., Chicago, was fatally injured when the automobile in which he was riding collided with another at Wolf Road and 143rd street.

Clananahan was taken to the Burnside hospital, 9435 Langley ave., nearly twenty miles away by Dr. W. R. Schussler of Orland Park after the latter was summoned from his home.

Fletcher Shobe, 26 years old, of 6911 Yale avenue, the driver of the other car, and Mrs. Shobe, who suffered a fractured skull, were also taken to the hospital by the doctor.

The license on Shobe's car was issued to the City of Chicago, Bureau of Streets, at 2322 South Ashland avenue. Employees of the city garage at that address said the car was allotted Shobe's father, Roy, to survey traffic as an assistant to L. J. Sorensen, city traffic engineer.

The car into which the Shobe car crashed was driven by Conrad Williamson of Joliet. It is understood that the latter disappeared after the accident.

The displeasure of the pickets was aroused when the Natoma dairy began buying its supplies of milk from Wisconsin instead of from farmers in Kane and Du Page counties.

Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy of Chicago has been named as an executive vice chairman of the National Woman's committee of the 1935 Mobilization for Human Needs, and Mrs. B. F. Doctor Sloan came to Bloomington in 1905 and later organized the American Association for the Study of Golfer. He was the first president. Doctor Sloan also served as president of the Illinois State Medical society and the Illinois board of health.

Dr. Austin A. Hayden, former president of the Chicago Medical society, issued a warning at the fourteenth annual Illinois conference of the Catholic Hospital association in the Palmer house, Chicago, that organization and efficiency must be built up in private institutions "if they are to withstand the ravages of socialized medicine." Two hundred representatives of the 64 Catholic hospitals in Illinois attended the sessions.

Esser was convicted on charges of embezzlement and started serving four concurrent sentences of one to ten years each on January 24, 1928. He was accused of embezzling $530,000 and squandering it in high living.

More than 1,000 farmers of Will and adjoining counties gathered in Joliet to form vigilante groups to combat live stock thieves. Law enforcing officers advised them to "shoot first and ask questions later," if trespassers invaded their farms. The meeting, held at the Joliet Township high school auditorium, was called principally through the efforts of Leonard W. Braham, as a climax of several months of increasingly bold cattle and chicken thefts, which have cost farmers thousands of dollars. Howard C. Klett of Joliet, representing the Pure Milk association, was elected chairman of the meeting, and was given authority to name a committee to form vigilante units in every township of Will county. Bedtime Story for Children

WIT AGAINST WIT

IT WAS a dreadful game the hunter with the terrible gun and Lightfoot the Deer were playing in the Green Forest. It was a matching of wit against wit, the hunter seeking to take Lightfoot's life and Lightfoot seeking to save it. The experience of other years had taught Lightfoot much of the ways of hunters and not one of the things he had learned about them was forgotten. But the hunter in his turn knew much of the ways of deer. So it was that each was trying his best to outguess the other.

When the hunter found the hiding place Lightfoot had left at the warning

There Was Only One Direction in Which It Was Safe for Lightfoot to Move.

of Sammy Jay, he followed Lightfoot's tracks for a short distance. It was slow work and only one whose eyes had been trained to notice little things could have done it. You see, there was no snow and it was only now and then when he had stepped on a bit of soft ground that Lightfoot had left a footprint. But there were other signs which the hunter knew how to read, a freshly upturned leaf here and there, a bit of moss lightly crushed. These things told the hunter which way Lightfoot had gone.

Slowly, patiently, watchfully, the hunter followed. After a while he stopped with a satisfied grin. "I thought as much," he muttered. "He heard that pesky Jay and circled around so as to get my scent. I'll just cut across to my old trail and unless I am greatly mistaken I'll find his tracks there."

So, swiftly but silently, the hunter cut across to his old trail and in a few moments he found just what he expected, one of Lightfoot's footprints. Once more he grinned. "Well, old fellow, I've outguessed you this time," said he to himself. "I am behind you and the wind is from you to me so that you cannot get my scent. I wouldn't be a bit surprised if you're back right where you started from, behind that old windfall." He at once began to move forward silently and cautiously with eyes and ears alert and his terrible gun ready for instant use.

Now when Lightfoot, following behind the hunter, had lost the scent of the latter, he guessed right away that the latter had found his tracks and had started to follow them. Lightfoot stood still and listened with all his might for some little sound to tell him where the hunter was. But there was no sound and after a little Lightfoot began to move on. He didn't dare remain still lest the hunter should creep up within shooting distance.

There was only one direction in which it was safe for Lightfoot to move, and that was the direction from which the Merry Little Breezes were blowing. As long as they brought him none of the dreaded man smell he knew that he was safe. The hunter might be behind him. Probably he was. But ahead of him, so long as the Merry Little Breezes were blowing in his face and brought no dreaded man-smell, was safety.

Will County Supplies Material For Giant Rock Garden

A bit of rural Illinois has been transplanted to form the heart of a beautiful rock garden, now being created on the grounds of the Olson rug company in the center of Chicago's industrial district.

As the motorists swish by the glorified landscape at Crawford avenue and Diversey boulevard, they will enjoy a veritable glimpse of the Central Illinois River, and the tantalizing sight of a gushing 25-foot waterfall.

Work on the $15,000 replica garden, according to Walter Olson, rug company president and ardent nature lover, was begun in April as part of an elaborate landscaping project extending over an area of 10 acres. When the work is finished, the garden spot will be known as Olson Memorial Park in honor of the Indian tribes who took part in early Illinois history.

The trees in the rock garden were obtained from the Kankakee river district, and were transported to Chicago—roots and all. Mr. Olson also spent weeks in a search for aged stones, old stumps and rare forms of native vegetation. Most of them came from Will County, near Drummond and Wilmington. The garden is 150 feet long, and 25 feet high, with three waterfalls cascading into a lily pond at its base. An old dug-out canoe has been obtained and will be placed in natural surroundings.

The first step in the industrial development was initiated in the spring when ground was broken for the $500,000, six story addition to the company's original plant. More than 200 men are now working on the structure, completion of which is expected for next month.

Texas Seeking Relics of 1836

Members of the historical advisory board of the Texas Centennial Commission are assembling facts upon which collection of records and relics for the State of Texas Building at the Texas Centennial Exposition in Dallas will be based. Historic documents, battle flags and other tokens of pioneer days will be included. Each section of the state will be given special treatment. Scrolls bearing the names of colonists from other states in the Union who participated in the Texas Revolution in 1836 will be included.

Again—The People Speak

By RAYMOND PILCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

An event of unusual import to those who would tinker with the United States Constitution has occurred recently in Pennsylvania—the state wherein our National Charter of Liberties was conceived and written.

There, for the first time since recent efforts to remould our Federal Constitution along the lines of the newer political philosophy gained national prominence, the people themselves were given opportunity to say what they thought of that sort of thing.

Emphatically they rejected the idea. Dominated by the vote from rural districts and the smaller cities, they decided that this was no time to risk the possible writing into fundamental law of various unproven theories now being urged throughout America as a substitute for crystallized experience.

The people of Pennsylvania, of course, voted only on the question of revising their own state constitution. But fundamentally—and despite whatever political spokesmen on either side may claim—some of the principles involved were comparable to those brought into prominence by the nation-wide efforts of certain groups to remould our Federal Constitution into a form more readily influenced by passing fears and passions.

In the response may be read a heartening message of encouragement to all who oppose efforts to scrap certain essential elements of our American system of government in favor of new and untried theories. It is:

That the great body of the people—men and women who constitute the backbone of America—are not at this time in sympathy with a policy of sudden changes. They realize that while it was the Declaration of Independence that proclaimed personal liberty, it is the Federal Constitution that assures it. They do not intend to surrender that guarantee.

Again—the People speak.

Songs of Troubadours

There were several kinds of songs sung by the troubadours—the canzonet, or love song; serenade, or evening song; aubade, or morning song; servante in praise of patrons, roundelay, or song with refrain or chorus; dance song accompanying the round dance, and the pastourelle, treating of Arcadian love.

Floyd Gibbons ADVENTURERS' CLUB

Hello, Everybody!
"Gotham Melodrama"
By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter.

IT'S a funny thing, boys and girls, that many of us are apt to confuse adventure with travel. I've got my dictionary right here—I need it most of the time—so let's see what Noah Webster has to say about the word "adventure." Here it is:

Adventure: An event, the issue of which is determined by chance. That's plain enough isn't it? You don't have to go to the jungles of Africa looking for adventure. If you don't watch out that fickle lady will come right into your home—or into your car as she did to William Boiko.

Billy Boiko certainly wasn't looking for adventure the day he parked his car on Broadway at 38th street and went in to call on a customer. He was just looking for an order, but when he came out and got in his car Bill says he got a bigger order than he bargained for. As he started his motor a quiet voice from the rear seat of his own car startled him.

"Step on it, Buddy," the voice ordered, "or I'll blow your brains out."

Bill looked around and saw three determined-looking gents in the rear seat of his sedan. One of them held a heavy revolver pointed in Bill's direction and Bill says he looked like he meant business.

"Beat it to 58th street and make it snappy," the voice continued.

It's Tough to Pass a Policeman Like This. Bill says he didn't ask any questions at all, but just did as he was told. He was pretty nervous, though, and found it hard to drive. It's hard enough, Bill says, driving with a "back-seat driver" under ordinary circumstances, but when they have a gun trained on the back of your neck it's awful. His driving didn't seem to make a hit with his hard-looking passengers.

Death or Dishonor—It Was Bill's Choice.

"Step on it, I said," the man continued, "or I'll step on the back of your neck with this rod."

Bill speeded up with all sorts of thoughts running through his head. He wondered if he were being kidnaped or being taken for a ride, but when he started to say something they told him to "shut up." He says it broke his heart to pass so close to traffic policemen and not have them help him.

When the car reached 58th street Bill thought his troubles would soon be over. But they were only starting. As he turned east on the street a terrific roar broke out. Bill slipped down in the driver's seat in terror. ANOTHER CAR HAD OPENED FIRE ON THEM!

Impossible Melodrama Becomes Reality. Bill couldn't believe his ears and his eyes. Imagine a Wild West thing like this happening to an innocent salesman right in the center of New York City. But it was happening and Bill was right in the middle of it. The cold barrel of the gun brought him up straight in his seat.

"Beat it or you get the works," Bill heard, and he says this time he sure did "beat it." Around corners they went on two wheels—straight through traffic signals—on the wrong side of the street—in and out of taxis and narrowly missing pedestrians.

But still the three men complained and with threats urged him on. Bill heard police sirens behind him now and knew that he was aiding in the escape of criminals, but he didn't know what to do about it. A machine gun opened up and a bullet went through his windshield right by his head. The men in his car were firing through the rear window. Bill says he drove in a daze—he swerved, turned, zigzagged and passed red lights like a madman. And all the time those bullets buzzed all around him. He says it seemed to him as though everybody in New York were shooting, and he made up his mind then and there to do something about it.

Saved From Death by Automobile Crash. An accident seemed to be the best way out. Anything, Bill thought, was better than this. He steered for a small car on the right, planning to smash into it, but his eye caught a flash of the two baby faces staring out of the rear window—he veered off and almost turned over. The quick turn shot him to the left side of the road—he saw a car coming at him and closed his eyes.

Zowie! The crash was heard for blocks around, but Bill doesn't remember hearing it. He woke up in the hospital with his head in bandages and a big policeman standing by his bed. The policeman started questioning him, but Bill was in no condition to answer questions, so he was put under arrest.

Well, sir, Bill told his story when he felt better, but the police didn't believe it. All they knew was that he was driving the bandit car and trying to make a getaway.

Well, sir, after all Bill had gone through it looked for a while as though he were up against it. The captured bandits implicated him, but finally admitted that they didn't even know who he was, but were sore at him for wrecking the car and causing their capture. Witnesses, too, came forward to prove Bill's innocence, and, by golly, the police not only released him, but gave him credit for aiding in the capture of three desperate gangsters.

And that shows you, boys and girls, that adventure is always around the corner. If Bill had been killed, that would have been tragedy. But he wasn't, so it was adventure. "Chance," as the dictionary says, makes all the difference in the world.

Frock That Puts Accent on Youth

PATTERN 9343

Always a good beginning, this youthful tailored collar on the simple yoke makes a demure foil for the dainty softness of the bodice. The prettiness of the chic frock is furthered with a graceful flare sleeve—or it may puff, if you prefer. The results are so satisfying you'll find it real fun to run up this little dress in a dainty printed silk or cotton. A soft handkerchief linen would be stunning, too, and so easy to tub. Buttons and belt can pick up a color in the print and make a striking accent.

Pattern 9343 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3½ yards 39-inch fabric. Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to the Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York, N. Y.

Party Backs Roosevelt

Democratic party behind him in his next campaign. The chances of a split in his ranks are very small, indeed, and barring changes of which there are at present no hints at all, the New Deal will encompass the Democratic party which nominated and elected Mr. Roosevelt as President.

By those statements, it is not meant that no defections will take place. There always are some disgruntled and dissatisfied party men who break away. They have done it with Republicans and Democrats with equal abandon. There will be some in the 1936 campaign, but not very many. These statements are made by way of discounting offshoots of consequence under radical leadership and offshoots of equal consequence behind old-line conservative Democratic leadership. It is, of course, just possible that William Randolph Hearst, the publisher, and Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state under Woodrow Wilson, may succeed in development of a conservative alignment with major support but the situation is not one likely to cause the New Deal leaders any particular embarrassment. Likewise the death of Senator Huey P. Long removes what might possibly have been a radical party wedge. The late Louisiana senator was making some progress in development of a radical party but with him removed from the scene there is no longer any possibility of that group attaining a place of importance in the political structure. They are fighting among themselves and it is apparent now that the group will be split into a score of factions, none which will have any capacity to accomplish the purposes which Senator Long had outlined.

Judged Impartially, the death of Senator Long ought to enhance the Democratic prospects in 1936. This certainly is true unless the administration between now and the next election decides to court the conservative vote in the country and in doing so offends the progressive segment of voters to which Mr. Roosevelt largely owes his 1932 election. To reiterate, it is possible, of course, that Mr. Roosevelt or his party advisers may make mistakes which will throw the whole party machine out of gear, but they are not now in evidence.

The reason the passing of Huey Long is important from the political standpoint is pictured most reliably in the history of third party movements. While it is obvious that Senator Long could never have been elected President—and I believe he was too smart a politician to think that he could have been successful—there was the danger from the Roosevelt standpoint that he could alienate some part of the vote which elected Mr. Roosevelt in 1932. If he had been able to do this, it is certain that Republican chances would have been enhanced because the Republican vote would have remained solidly behind the Republican candidate.

Some years ago, Robert M. La Follette, then a senator from Wisconsin, ran for the Presidency on a third party ticket. He polled about five million votes. This happened at a time when the country was reasonably prosperous. Surely, the economic conditions were of a character that bred less discontent than those of this depression era. So, astute political observers tell me that it takes little stretch of the imagination to conceive of a radical party, led by a man of the dynamic characteristics of Huey Long, being able to poll as many as ten million votes throughout the country despite the difficulties that always face the organization of a new political party.

Whatever criticism may have been or may be voiced of the late senator from Louisiana, everywhere one goes among political leaders, he obtains the same expression of opinion respecting the senator's ability. He had a smart mind, one that grasped situations, particularly in politics, with great speed and he was always ready at a moment's notice to capitalize on those situations. Thus, if Mr. Long had lived, it is easy to imagine what he would have done in case the New Deal leaders made mistakes. He would have hopped on those mistakes with the avidity of a cat on a mouse; he would have magnified them in his speeches to his following and by these acts he would have aided and abetted the Republican opposition.

So, while the national capital was startled by Senator Long's death and appalled at the manner of his going, it is not a violation of any confidence to say that New Deal politicians are resting easier. They enjoyed Huey, the man, but they recognized in him an adversary decidedly dangerous to their cause.

Now, as to other factors involved, factors that might withdraw support from Mr. Roosevelt. I said above that the Hearst-Colby movement is doomed to defeat. The real effect and probably the only effect that movement will have will be to force the Roosevelt leaders to realign their strength in some states. Mr. Hearst, with the great power of his string of newspapers behind him, has yet to succeed in creating a potent political group. He attempted it when the late Warren Harding of Ohio was the Republican nominee and James M. Cox of the same state was put forward by the Democrats. It was my good fortune to be assigned as a correspondent to the convention of Mr. Hearst's new party. It was evident then as it later was proved by the votes that the enthusiastic delegates to that convention represented a following so small as to be utterly negligible. Even with the astute advice of Bainbridge Colby, little more will come out of the current movement.

Then, those who have their eyes on the facts instead of on the ballyhoo will promptly discount the talk about Democratic defection when they stop to consider some other things that are taking place. For example, there have been no more bitter dissents from New Deal policies than Senator Carter Glass of Virginia and Senator Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma have voiced. Mr. Glass lately has engaged in rites of burying the hatchet to the extent that he is not going to run for re-election in Virginia as anything but a Democrat.

Out in Oklahoma, Senator Gore has been making speeches that sound strangely as though he is almost friendly to the administration. He has been telling his audiences that he has stood with the President on many votes in the senate, sometimes when his vote was badly needed. Though it becomes apparent that while neither Senator Glass nor Senator Gore is enthusiastic about New Deal policies, neither of them is going to desert the Democratic party.

And, so it is in any number of other cases. They may not speak glowingly of President Roosevelt in their own campaigns for re-election but as candidates they are not going to fight him openly.

"Big Jim" Farley, the master New Deal politician, successfully avoided an out and out test of New Deal issues in Ohio when Governor Davey of that state announced recently that there would be no special election to choose a representative at large to fill a vacancy. The Ohio governor said it would cost too much money to hold a special election, his announcement being made at the White House just after President Roosevelt had agreed to allot $20,000,000 in public works funds for Ohio use.

But the astute Mr. Farley is not going to be able to avoid a test on New Deal issues in Kentucky. The situation in that state is that a Democrat of President Roosevelt's choice and who is supporting the New Deal from start to finish is running for governor against a hard-boiled and conservative Republican. The election will be the first week in November and thus a state-wide vote can be expected to measure the Roosevelt strength. Because of this, all of the maneuvers are being closely watched and the battle of those ballots obviously will be bitter.

The Kentucky test takes on additional significance and importance because of something that happened in choosing the Democratic nominee. The Kentucky fight is to determine whether Lient. Gov. A. B. Chandler, the Democrat, or former Representative King Swope, the Republican, will run the state. Governor Laffoon apparently wanted to have the Democratic nominee selected by the old convention method but the Roosevelt supporters preferred a primary. Consequently, Senator Barkley of Kentucky, a devout Roosevelt follower in the senate, was sent into his home state to see that the primary plan was made operative. The Democratic state committee which was empowered to choose the method of selecting the candidate was determined to have a convention and it was after this determination became known that Mr. Roosevelt participated in dictating the course the party should follow. Senator Barkley arrived in his home state bearing a letter signed "Franklin D. Roosevelt" urging the primary, and while Governor Laffoon was out of the state attempting to convince national leaders that his candidate for the Democratic nomination was the right one, Lieutenant Governor Chandler called a special session of the state legislature and put through a law compelling the selection of the candidate by the primary. Mr. Chandler won the nomination in the run-off although Thomas S. Rhea had polled more votes in the original primary than did Mr. Chandler.

So it is apparent beyond a doubt that Mr. Roosevelt recognizes the necessity for electing a Democrat, and New Deal supporters in Kentucky say that he is prepared to battle to the last ditch to accomplish it. Nevertheless, the fur will fly in Kentucky in November. It cannot be avoided. If the administration wins, undoubtedly New Deal stock will be enhanced in value. But, if the Republican nominee should win the Kentucky test, the whole New Deal must be prepared to wear an unusual black eye.

Golden Phantoms

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES
By Editha L. Watson

THE MISSING MUSKETEER

WHEN a London syndicate employed Herbert Hoover, then an engineer, to hunt for a lost mine, it was a rather good sign that there really must have been such a mine.

Its name was the Musketeer. It lay—and surely it still lies—in the Fraser river region on the border between the United States and Canada. It was found by Jacob Henshaw, an old prospector, and his partner.

The two men had lived with the Indians for several years. Perhaps they first heard of the mine from these humble friends—or perhaps they stumbled onto it as they followed after the golden phantom. But they found it rich enough to stay their steps. They built a little cabin, and went to work.

In September, 1873, Henshaw came into Vancouver—then a small place just beginning to grow—with a donkey which carried two sacks of ore. He took this to an assayer, and presently word spread about that here was something which assayed the richest north of the Comstock lode.

There would have been a gold rush in no time, had anyone known where to rush. But Henshaw, who could neither read nor write, had a deep-rooted suspicion of his fellow-men. He felt that no good would come of it if he gave out even the faintest of clues. He knew that he should file his claim—but that would place on record the exact location of his find. In the meantime, men bothered him continually, asking all sorts of questions, watching every move he made.

To get rid of them he invented various stories, hoping that they would believe his tales and go away. But somehow there lacked the ring of truth, and no one bothered to take his stories seriously.

Henshaw was being driven to desperation. At last he figured that if he could go back and consult with his partner, they could work out some way of filing the claim in secret. But here was another problem, to get away without detection.

How he managed it, no one knew, but somehow Henshaw "turned up missing" one day. Everyone thought that he had eluded his annoyances, and that after a while he would return to Vancouver with more ore, or else that his partner would show up, to try what he could do in Henshaw's stead.

Weeks went by; months; years. Neither of the miners came. No one heard of them. No one knew what had happened. Everyone guessed: perhaps Henshaw had been caught in a blizzard; perhaps his partner had been killed by Indians; perhaps—

And perhaps some day the Musketeer will be discovered again. So far it has managed to stay a mystery. Men have hunted for it, certainly, time and time again. Those who have faith in spirits have often been told by these unseen influences just where to search—but something must be wrong, for they seek but never find.

RED MEN'S GOLD

THREE brothers named Rolleston went into the Uintah basin in the '60s, in search of gold. They found more than they were looking for in a rich silver and gold deposit—silver sulphide, sprinkled liberally with coarse gold.

Although the Indians were a constant menace, the brothers got out of the place with three mule loads of ore, which they took to Salt Lake City and sold for $20,000.

The Indians had warned them, in no uncertain terms, never to return to the mine, but three years later they took five mules and went back for more of the ore. They mined enough to load their animals, and were about ready to go back to civilization again, when the Indians appeared once more. Exactly what happened no one has been able to say, but the Indian version of the affair was that the brothers fell into the Duchesne river, and the weight of the gold in their pockets held them under and caused them to drown. The mules simply disappeared.

After this the place remained unmolested for years. At last a relative of the Rollestons went out to hunt for it. But cloudbursts had obliterated all signs of the diggings.

This may have been the same mine that Caleb Rhoads found. He said, at least, that it was in the Uintah reservation and that he had an understanding with the Utes so that he would be unmolested if he kept the place a secret. It is certain that men who tried to follow him were fired on by unseen persons.

Rhoads made a trip into the unknown region every year for 18 years; then he died. A man named Hartzell married the widow in hopes, it may be, of inheriting the mine, but she did not know the location—and although Hartzell hunted for a long time for the mysterious mine he never succeeded in locating it.

The sparrow hawk's diet consists of less than one-fifth of 1 per cent of game birds and no poultry. More than 50 per cent of its diet is composed of insects and 25.4 per cent of mice and other small mammals.

BUYER DELUDED OFTEN BY COLOR TEST FOR FRUIT

The housewife who bends over a fruit stall and picks brightly colored oranges in preference to the paler type is wasting her time, for the color of the fruit has no bearing on the nutritive content, reports a bulletin from the Department of Agriculture. There was a time, the writer remarks, when a farmer who produced a crop of pale oranges could not expect to receive as high a price for his yield as his neighbor whose fruit grew in brilliantly colored skins, but scientists took the situation in hand and developed a plan to outwit mother nature's apparent lack of interest in the pale fruit. The treatment, which is a highly technical process, embraces the use of ethylene gas.

The action of ethylene gas on pale fruit tinged with an unripe green shade is best described as a forcing or hastening of the process which changes tree foliage from green to brown in autumn. The passing of time kills greenery in most cases, and the process used on fruit is simply a speeding up of the change.

Ethylene has no effect whatever on the acid-sugar content which is the scientific test of ripeness in fruit. The Department of Agriculture recognizes the ethylene gas process as a legitimate trade practice for mature fruit. On immature fruit, its use is strictly prohibited, however.

HITCH-HIKING FLY SPREADS DISEASE

The common house fly is a hitch-hiker. However, the fly doesn't bother to jerk a thumb and ask a ride: it flies into moving autos or even trains or airplanes without permission and often travels hundreds of miles before leaving its chosen vehicle.

This habit of flies traveling great distances on other power than their own has made local fly eradication campaigns less effective than the campaigners hoped. Cases have been found where a fly carried disease germs on its legs and body for miles and infected people in the community where it settled. No previous cases of the disease were in existence in the new community and health authorities could find no other source of infection than flies.

Repeated warnings of physicians and health officials have apparently failed to instill a proper fear of the house fly in the average mind. However, a more thorough knowledge of the habits of a fly would increase the respect for this tiny insect, according to authorities on the subject.

Decent cleanliness in any home requires protection against the menace of flies. Whether a fly is home-born or a hitch-hiking visitor, he is a danger. Fortunately, an effective fly-killing program can be conducted in any home by the use of a reliable fly spray containing an ample quantity of Pyrethrins, a product derived from Pyrethrum flowers, which is death to flies, when sprayed in a fine mist.

"I've discovered Calumet's big, new 10¢ can!"

"No more 'by-guess-and-by-golly' baking in this house now!"

says Mrs. Owen H. Fleming, 1235 Judson Ave., Evanston, Ill.

Mrs. Fleming was one of the first women to get the big, new 10¢ can of Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder.

"No need for any woman to take chances with her baking now," she says. "That new 10¢ can of Calumet certainly means that the very best can be bought at a bargain."

Ask your grocer to show you the new, bigger 10¢ Calumet can!

A SIMPLE TWIST... and the Easy-Off Top lifts off. No spilling, no broken finger-nails!

WHY DOES CALUMET give such astonishing "baking luck?" Why is Calumet different from other baking powders? Because Calumet combines two distinct leavening actions. A quick one for the mixing bowl. A slower one for the oven... And Calumet's famous double-action is so perfectly balanced and controlled that it produces perfect leavening—every time.

All Calumet prices are lower! Calumet is now selling at the lowest prices in its history. The Full-Pound Can now sells regularly for only 25¢. And if you want a smaller size—get the new, big 10¢ can—a lot of good baking for a dime—with Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder.

Blood Stirring

Farm Conditions

Insurance against the experience of the past several years and we must have price protection and that is cost of production. For instance, if seed oats cost 65 to 70c a bushel and it takes approximately 3 bushels of seed per acre and now at harvest time it is 15c; the problem is how many bushels must a man produce before he has one cent for himself? Almost more than any field yielded this year to say nothing of the hard work and expense involved. Consequently creditors vie with each other for our crops.
The farmer, like a drowning man, is grasping at straws and these straws are feed loans and other loans. Only solution offered is more straws dispensed through a ramifi-cation of red tape that staggers the imagination.

Don't say there isn't anything you can do about it. While you are grabbing that dollar, against your better judgment, to reduce production, our imports are increasing at an alarming rate. The Commerce Department issued a release on August 11 in which it is stated that the American purchases of foreign pork, in the first six months of this year have jumped 350 per cent above imports in the same period last year and last year it was 500 per cent above the normal importation. That 850 per cent would mean quite a bit to American farmers if they had any pork to sell. As it is, Canada is the chief beneficiary of the A. A. A. policy of killing the foundation stock, in the fresh pork line, while cured hams and shoulders were supplied by Canada, Poland and Germany.

Western senators have again asked the war department why it continues to buy beef for the use of the army in Manila and in Hawaii and from Australia instead of from the United States and the reply of the war department is that it buys its beef where it can buy cheapest. It is explained that bids for 2 million pounds of beef were on a competitive basis and Australian packers were able to submit bids ranging from 70 to 90 percent lower than American packers because of the shorter ocean haul, notwithstanding the duties on foreign beef. These purchases of foreign beef by our army are contrary to the orders of Congress and American cattle growers are anxious to know by what authority the buying is done. If the army is to be fed on cheap foreign beef in defiance of the law, it is only logical that the rest of the people should insist on the same privilege.

Because we learn facts like these, through our organization and dare expose the exploiters of Agriculture, our self-styled enemies (the monied interests) call us "red" admitting we aren't green.
